

SENATOR YARBOROUGH, Texas' newest legislator and his wife got a big Washington welcome earlier in the day. At a 6-to-8 party at the Women's National Democratic Club, the Texas State Society, headed by President Claud Wilde, turned out 400 strong to greet the Yarboroughs in proper friendly Texas fashion.

Senator Lyndon Johnson, lean and tanned after a vacation in his home State, said he was amused to read in the papers that he had "holed up in his ranch and was not seeing anybody."

"In the 10 days I was home," he said, "I made 10 speeches. I was all over the State. I think it agrees with me though; I feel fine."

He and Speaker Sam Rayburn stood in the receiving line with the Yarboroughs, whose coming to Washington probably pleased these two above all others.

While standing there they got their first news of Senator McCarthy's death. The Speaker sent his secretary Miss Alla Clary to find out by phone if it was true. It quickly spread all through the crowd.

Familiar Texas faces on hand were Justice and Mrs. Tom Clark, Gen. and Mrs. Charles Cabell, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Dick Rubottom, former Senator and Mrs. Tom Connally, Mrs. R. D. Randolph, Texas Democratic National Committeewoman; all members of the Texas delegation and the Dale Millers.

The Clark Thompsons were just in from Dallas, and Liz said her suit (by which she hopes to recover some of the millions in her mother's estate intended for her) is going very well.
